PERC Ultra is typically used for large scale applications that need to use the rich features of Standard Edition Java libraries, coupled with predictable performance. PERC is a mature and proven product, not an experimental program offered by competitors. It has been field tested in more applications than any other real-time virtual machine system in application areas as diverse as fleet telematics, industrial automation, civil avionics, and military field equipment and network infrastructure.